

It is a technology that is not intended to emit radio signals, but such is the nature that of the power distribution network particularly in rural areas that it does. This causes problems with spectrum users - military, civilian, broadcast and amateur. The UK view is that it would be detrimental to radio users' interests and possibly national ones.

Best Regards